ECONOMY: STILL OPTIMISTIC

Central New York has been anticipating the arrival of Micron Technologies since the initial announcement in October 2022. More than two years later, Micron has secured $4.6 billion in federal grants to build the first two plants of its planned $100 billion megacomplex, however, site work and construction will not commence until approvals are secured from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the state Department of Environmental Conservation. The anticipated timeframe to break ground is November 2025. Following the initial 2022 announcement, several suppliers of Micron sought properties in the area, however, with the delays, these ancillary companies have put relocation plans on hold until construction on the megacomplex is underway.

Other industries active in the Syracuse market include food and beverage manufacturing and distribution, pick and pull distribution, paper and packaging, and logistics. Since the 2024 presidential election, and the potential for tariffs on imported goods, there has been a noticeable uptick in activity for warehousing in the market.

SUPPLY OR DEMAND: MARKET REMAINS TIGHT

The Syracuse Industrial market remained active in 2024, even with limited inventory available and overall vacancy increasing 90 basis points year-over-year (YOY) to 4.1%. Flex and warehouse/distribution spaces of 5,000 square feet (sf) to 10,000 sf with docks and drive-ins, as well as spaces over 100,000-plus sf with high ceilings remain the most sought-after spaces. At some point, the tight supply of quality industrial space will hopefully give rise to speculative industrial/flex development in the market.

PRICING: ON THE RISE

Lease rates in the market continued to steadily increase. The overall market rate climbed 5.7% YOY, finishing 2024 at $7.19 psf. Office/service/flex has risen by $0.25 psf YOY with the highest gains within warehouse/distribution up 6.6% YOY, up $0.44 psf. Landlords with quality product are not having issues getting their asking rental rates, adding little or no concessions. Tenants are making concessions on their end to secure the few quality spaces available.
